Travellers 'careful with bookings'

Dec 21, 2008

Company crashes and the credit crunch are leading to a more careful approach from concerned consumers when booking holidays, it has been revealed.

As many as 69% have changed their booking habits, according to a survey by customer experience-monitoring company Global Reviews.

More than a quarter now check that their travel insurance will cover them before booking while 38% are more careful about the companies they deal with.
